All persons and/or entities (excluding governmental entities) in the United States, who or which purchased "Electrolytic Capacitors" and/or "Film Capacitors" (together, "Capacitors") directly from any of the "Defendants" listed below or any controlled subsidiaries, agents, affiliates or joint ventures from January 1, 2002 to December 31, 2013 and including entities that are inside the United States and were billed or invoiced for Capacitors by a Defendant (i.e. the Capacitors were "billed to" entities in the U.S.) or entities that are outside the U.S. and were billed or invoiced for Capacitors imported into the U.S. by a Defendant (i.e. the Capacitors were "billed to" entities outside the U.S. but "shipped to" entities in the U.S.). There is a separate class action for all persons and entities who purchased Electrolytic Capacitors and/or Film Capacitors indirectly from the Defendants (such as distributors or resellers including electronics stores, wholesalers or other suppliers).

Definition of "Electrolytic Capacitors":

Electrolytic Capacitors are generally a component of circuit boards which store and distribute electricity at certain times. They can be made of aluminum, ceramic and/or tantalum, and are typically sold in units of 1,000. These components can be found in personal computers (PCs), digital audiovisuals (AV), games and industrial appliances, notebook PCs, tablets, digital AVs, servers, cellular phones, smart phones, digital still cameras, supply circuits and inverter circuits. When purchased as a stand-alone product, Electrolytic Capacitors are directly traceable to the specific manufacturer.

Definition of "Film Capacitors":

Film Capacitors are a type of capacitor which uses insulating plastic film and one of two conductive materials, propylene or polyester. For purposes of this lawsuit, film capacitors include the following four generations: (1) film and aluminum foil capacitors, (2) film and other metal capacitors, (3) layered capacitors, and (4) surface-mount capacitors (i.e., capacitors without leads). Each generation contains different types of general-purpose capacitors and specific-purpose capacitors. These components can be found in appliances, lighting, power supply, digital AV, communications, games, direct current (DC) link for inverters, snubber for inverters, in battery filters, and in electric compressors.

ANTITRUST CLASS ACTION SETTLEMENTS

Case History

Several class action lawsuits were filed in 2014 alleging that the Defendants violated antitrust laws by unlawfully conspiring for nearly a decade to fix the prices of Electrolytic Capacitors and Film Capacitors sold in the United States. The lawsuits were subsequently consolidated in the Northern District of California. Since then, the class has reached settlements with the Settling Defendants in the total amount of $616.55 million to date (the details of which are noted below). *The litigation is currently ongoing against the Non-Settling Defendants and it is possible that additional funds may become available to the Class as the result of a trial or future settlements.

First, Second, Third and Fourth Rounds of Settlements: The First Round of Settlements with Fujitsu, NEC Tokin, Nitsuko, Okaya and ROHM totaled approximately $32.6 million and distribution of those funds occurred commencing in July 2018. The Second Round of Settlements with Hitachi ($63 million) and Soshin ($3.9 million) totaled approximately $66.9 million and the claim filing deadline was April 23, 2018. The Third Round of Settlements with Nichicon ($90 million) and Rubycon (up to $30 million) totaled approximately $120 million and the claim filing deadline was April 15, 2019. The Fourth Round of Settlements with Panasonic ($45 million), Holy Stone ($28 million), ELNA ($25 million), Shinyei ($2.95 million), AVX ($65 million), Shizuki ($1 million), KEMET ($62 million) and Taitso ($3.1 million) totaled approximately $232.05 million and the claim filing deadline was August 28, 2020. Distribution of the Second, Third and Fourth Round of Settlement funds has occurred.

Fifth Round of Settlements: The Fifth Round of Settlements with Matsuo ($5 million) and Nippon ($160 million) total approximately $165 million (the settlements received final Court approval). Distribution of these funds will occur at a future date.
