CLASS ACTION SUMMARY

CAPACITOR INDIRECT PURCHASER
ANTITRUST CLASS ACTION SETTLEMENTS

Case History

Several class action lawsuits were filed in 2014 alleging that the Defendants violated antitrust laws by unlawfully conspiring for nearly a decade to fix the prices of Electrolytic Capacitors and Film Capacitors sold in the United States. These lawsuits were subsequently consolidated in the Northern District of California. Since then, the class has reached settlements with the Settling Defendants in the approximate amount of $80.79 million. The litigation is currently ongoing against the Non-Settling Defendants and it is possible that additional funds may become available to the Class as the result of a trial or future settlements.

Definition of Electrolytic Capacitors: Electrolytic Capacitors are generally a component of circuit boards which store and distribute electricity at certain times. They can be made of aluminum, ceramic and/or tantalum, and are typically sold in units of 1,000. When purchased as a stand-alone product, Electrolytic Capacitors are directly traceable to the specific manufacturer.

Definition of Film Capacitors: Film Capacitors are a type of capacitor which uses insulating plastic film and one of two conductive materials, propylene or polyester. For purposes of this lawsuit, film capacitors include the following four generations: (1) film and aluminum foil capacitors, (2) film and other metal capacitors, (3) layered capacitors, and (4) surface-mount capacitors (i.e., capacitors without leaves).
